

Hazardous Waste Compliance Challenges of a Small College

Presenter(s)

Marcia Metcalfe, Chemical Hygiene and Technical Specialist, Elmira College

Abstract Text

Some hazardous waste compliance problems are exuberated by being a small college. The job of hazardous waste collection and processing is never a person's sole job and quite often it is the responsibility of the person/persons generating the waste to make sure it is processed correctly. There is no one storage facility, resulting in waste stored by the generator in his or her shop, laboratory or studio. There is no Environmental Health and Safety Department and therefore no one to oversee the program. It is very difficult to convince persons that they have hazardous waste, and collection and disposal can be neglected. Let's discuss ways in which colleges have solved these problems.

Presenter Bio(s)

Marcia Metcalfe, MS; CHO
Chemical Hygiene and Technical Specialist
Elmira College

Marcia received her BS from Baldwin-Wallace College, and her MS from SUNY Fredonia. She is a Certified Chemical Hygiene Officer. Marcia has been at Elmira College for 17 years, with responsibility for hazardous waste for the past 10 years.